Are there some jobs robots could never do?

In the news this week

A new robot called Digit, designed to be human-like and that is capable of lifting and moving items, is being tested in warehouses of the online retailer, Amazon. The robot is in its first few weeks of trials at Amazon's facility in Seattle, USA, as the company tries to improve automation in its processes. To begin with, the robot is being taught to pick up and move empty boxes to ensure that they are ready for reuse. The yellow boxes, or totes, are used throughout the company's fulfilment process.

Things to talk about at home ...

- > Do you think that robots will be used more and more in workplaces and homes? If so, what do you feel they will be used for? Why?
- > Make a list of jobs that you think robots would be good at and a list of those that you think people will always be needed for.

This weeks useful vocabulary

Automation – The use of machines and computers that can operate without needing humans. The robot is in its first few weeks of trials at Amazon's facility in Seattle, USA, as the company tries to improve automation in its process.

Fulfilment – The process of taking an order and sending a product to a customer. The yellow boxes, or totes, are used throughout the company's fulfilment process.

Sophisticated – More advanced or complex. The robot is not yet able to perform more sophisticated tasks.

Terrain – An area or type of land. This key feature, which gives the robot the ability to walk over different terrains and up steps as found in human environments, could be particularly useful for Amazon.

Tote – A large strong bag with two handles. The yellow boxes, or totes, are used throughout the company's fulfilment process.

Trialled – Test something to assess its suitability or performance. Digit is a 175cm-tall robot created by Agility Robotics that is being trialled at some of Amazon's warehouses.

Library Visit - Year 3

Over the past week, Year 3 have visited the North Library. The children got to know more about the library and how to find books they might want to read. The children then had the opportunity to find a book about Europe (our geography topic) and find some interesting facts to share with everyone. The children had a brilliant morning and were great representatives of Burlington.
